- FOREWORD -

The need for a suitable and comprehensive bibliography on POSTWAR READJUSTMENT for service men and women is not a chimerical problem for the future but rather a present necessity. More than 1,000,000 men and women have been discharged from the armed forces of the United States already. The return of these people and millions more to a new life pattern with utmost rapidity and success requires constant search for the presentation of all pertinent material in a form available and useful to all concerned. Such is the purpose of this initial list and its succeeding supplements as issued.

An outline of the bibliography as presented in this first basic list is given on page 1 following. As an explanation of purpose and intent it may be advisable to give here a rather precise statement concerning each of the main headings.

Reorientation. The first steps in adjusting the service man or woman to the new conditions, opportunities and responsibilities confronting them in the postwar world. Heading them in the right direction both collectively and individually.

Rehabilitation. The training, education, re-education or adjustments necessary to enable the individual to carry on in the right direction and to attain the desired results.

Employment. The general problems involved together with an exhaustive coverage of specific opportunities in all fields of endeavor.

Readjustment for the Handicapped. The special means, materials, methods and opportunities for men or women with physically limiting handicaps resulting from their war service.

Organizations and Agencies. A compilation of correct names, addresses and activities of groups working specifically in this field.

Bibliographies. A listing of many important bibliographies in any or all of the fields of interest in this problem which might be of supplemental value to the users of this bibliography.

When using this bibliography or any of its supplements the following points in its preparation and form should be kept in mind.

a. Wherever possible the actual material as listed has been examined personally by a professionally qualified librarian. Any items not thus examined are identified with an asterisk (*) following the entry.

b. A complete and permanent file of all entries and any pertinent information concerning them is maintained in the office of the Ninth Service Command Librarian, Building 640, Presidio of San Francisco, California, and is available for use by interested military or civilian personnel.

c. For the most common surnames (Smith, Jones, Brown etc.) all available given names are included. For less common surnames initials or first name only are given.

d. All titles of books, articles etc. are given in full caps to facilitate use.

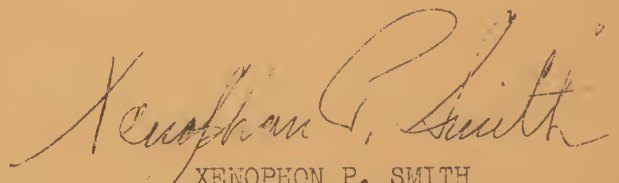

e. Brief annotations, wherever given, are placed on a separate line to distinguish them clearly from the matter in the main entry.

f. For little known publishers such as institutions and boards full addresses are given. Complete addresses on all publishers cited are available on inquiry.

g. Entries particularly applicable in more than one field within the bibliography are repeated at all desirable points. A special effort is made, however, to avoid useless repetition which would unduly increase bulk but add nothing to efficiency.

h. The qualifying restriction on all material considered for inclusion is, "Does it particularly concern or affect the problems of 'G. I. Joe or Jane' and those working with them?" If any tendency to err is apparent it should be on the side of elimination of material, otherwise interesting and valuable, which did not seem specifically applicable to the main problem-- POSTWAR READJUSTMENT for Service Men and Women.

A word of appreciation is definitely in order for the splendid cooperation of libraries and librarians in the San Francisco Bay Region in making both facilities and staff assistance available to the professional personnel of this office. Because of this cooperative spirit and the unusual extent of library holdings thus offered it has been possible to examine carefully most of the material cited. Through similar cooperativeness on an even wider scale, including interested libraries and librarians everywhere, it is believed that a truly major bibliographic contribution to POSTWAR READJUSTMENT can be made. And to that end this office offers its constant service in coordinating the central file and compiling periodic supplements. And to the purpose of providing every possible assistance to 'G. I. Joe and Jane' in this problem of readjustment this office pledges its full and continuing interest.

XENOPHON P. SMITH
Service Command Librarian
Ninth Service Command, A.S.F.
